

A WORD FROM JENNIFER

We know that you cherish your marriage and are passionate about your children! However, raising a family while serving in church leadership is a challenging balancing act. Forty-five percent of pastor's wives believe that spiritual, emotional, and physical burnout is a very real threat to their families.¹ We're here to help you continue to be equipped, encouraged and enthused about the role God has given you. Please call us, and let us walk alongside you in this treasured journey.

A MESSAGE FROM GEOF

Focus on the Family and the sponsoring denominations that make up the Clergy Care Network, are committed to doing everything we can to ensure that families become and remain healthy and strong. We believe biblical principles are the foundation for family life and that's why we are working with pastors - providing the tools they need to give spiritual guidance to the families in their congregations.

As much as we care about healthy families in our churches and society, we also care about you and your family. We want to be your cheerleaders. We want to encourage you and pray for you. In short, we want to do what we can to ensure that ministry remains exciting and fresh for you.

Pastoral ministry is a calling second to none. Our toll free line is a confidential "place" where you and your immediate family can come when you need a listening ear.

We are honoured to be at your service,

Geof Cornelsen,
MTS(C)
Director of Clergy Care

WE ARE HERE FOR YOU

The number one concern of pastors' wives is the health of their marriage

-CCN caller statistics

75% of Canadian pastors say they do not adequately care for themselves spiritually or emotionally

-Canadian Pastors & Spouses Gatherings

CCN CALLER QUOTES

"I contacted CCN several weeks ago feeling rather burned out and depressed. Because of your help I am on the road to healing and I am beginning to feel the joy of life and of ministry again."

-Canadian Pastor

"All I needed was for someone to care and listen, and to encourage me. Thank you!"

-Canadian Pastor's Wife

TERENCE ROLSTON

President, Focus on the Family Canada

"Pastors shepherd our congregations, and as a result, experience firsthand the Lord's great love for His people. At times, however, that work comes with a spiritual, emotional, and physical cost. In their roles as servant leaders, pastors are constantly meeting the needs of others and sometimes find themselves in need of encouragement. That is why The Clergy Care Network is here. It is a way Focus on the Family Canada and the many sponsoring denominations can collectively say we want to help and that we care."
